Don’t Blame the Games:
Video Games as a Tool to Reduce Childhood Obesity

Dr Amanda Staiano PhD, MPP
Postdoctoral Research Fellow
Division of Population Science
Pennington Biomedical Research Center
Louisiana, U.S.

Monday 29 October
12.30pm to 1.30pm

VENUE:
• Rural Clinical School – Burnie Multi A

VIDEOCONFERENCE TO:
• Mersey Seminar Room 1
• NH.M209 UTAS Newnham campus
• Hobart 18 Elizabeth St, CML building, level 5
• Other UTAS and DHHS sites state wide by request to RCS Reception on 6430 4550 or email: rural.clinical.school@utas.edu.au

Amanda Staiano, PhD, MPP, from Pennington Biomedical Research Center in Baton Rouge, Louisiana, will present emerging empirical evidence on the potential for active video games, i.e. “exergames,” to promote weight loss, physical activity, and psychosocial health among overweight and obese children and adolescents.