AIIA Tasmania invites you to attend an event with

Professor Jan Pakulski, Dr Matthew Sussex and Dr Matthew Killingsworth

On

‘Ukraine and the Limits of Politics’

Jan Pakulski is a professor of sociology and former Dean of Arts at the University of Tasmania. The most recent book from his lengthy publication list is Towards Leader Democracy, co-authored in 2012. Polish born and educated, Professor Pakulski includes democratisation and post-communism in eastern Europe among his research interests. He is a fellow of the Academy of Social Sciences in Australia.

Matthew Sussex is head of the politics and international relations program at the University of Tasmania. He is a former president of the AIIA’s Tasmanian branch, and his research interests are focussed on international security, Russian politics and foreign policy, and strategic theory. In 2012 he edited Conflict in the former USSR, published by Cambridge University Press.

Matthew Killingsworth is lecturer in international relations at the University of Tasmania and is currently researching issues pertaining to the laws of war and international criminal justice, with a special interest in the emerging “responsibility to protect” doctrine. In 2013 he was a visiting fellow at the Oxford Institute for Ethics, Law and Armed Conflict. He is the author of Civil Society in Communist Eastern Europe, published in 2012.

Event Details

This is a free public lecture. Both members and non-members are welcome to attend,

Date/Time: Tuesday 20th May 2014 | 6:00pm (refreshments from 5:30pm)

Venue: Law Lecture Theatre 2, Law School, UTAS, Sandy Bay campus

RSVP: Please email your RSVP to tas.branch@internationalaffairs.org.au. You can also register your attendance online at www.internationalaffairs.org.au/tas